AUSTIN TODD IN THE LIMELIGHT

Was Arrested on Charge of His New Mother-in-Law—Said he Drew a Revolver.

LATER SHE REPUDIATED IT

Now Faces Charge of Perjury, Being Released on Bond in the Indianapolis Courts.

The following story from the Indianapolis News concerns Austin Todd, a traction conductor, formerly of this city, and the troubles he has had with his new mother-in-law:

A case involving fine legal points in Police court today caused Judge Whallon to remand Mrs. Christina Settle, an aged widow, living at 205 North Temple avenue, to the grand jury on a charge of perjury, at the same time fining Austin H. Todd, her son-in-law, against whom she had made the affidavit for carrying concealed weapons, $25 and costs for the offense charged by Mrs. Settle.

Mrs. Settle lives with her son-in-law, Todd. There has been much trouble in the household of late, the result of quarrels between Mrs. Todd and her husband, with Mrs. Settle as a third party. Last Wednesday evening there was a general row during which Mrs. Settle made up her mind to bring the police into the case and compel Todd to be good. She was told to file an affidavit alleging the offenses he had committed. She, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Todd, went to the police station and, before Frederick Bonfield, a deputy prosecutor, filed an affidavit charging Todd with carrying concealed weapons.

Todd was arrested Thursday. The case came up in Police court yesterday, and Mrs. Settle, on the stand, testified that Todd had moved his hand menacingly in his coat pocket as if to indicate that he had a revolver. This occurred during the quarrel last Wednesday night.

"Did you see the revolver?" asked Prosecutor Hack yesterday.

"No, I can't say that I did," the witness answered. "He had his hand in his pocket as if he had a revolver there, but I can't say that I saw it."

Bonfield and policemen Burris and Golsch, who arrested Todd, said that Mrs. Settle had told them that he not only moved his hand up and down as if drawing a revolver, but that she saw the weapon. Mrs. Settle denied this and was arrested on a charge of perjury, the order for her arrest being made by Judge Whallon. She was released under $1000 bond. The case of Todd was continued until today.

In the Police court this morning Mrs. Settle was again called to the stand. She still insisted that Todd

RECEPTION, TUESDAY NIGHT

Converts Will be Given Glad Hand at the Big Gathering.

Tomorrow night a reception will be given at the Main Street Christian church to all the new members who united with the church during the Yeuell revival. All members and friends are invited to come and a great and happy time is promised. This will be one of the most important social events of the church this winter and a representative gathering of the whole membership of the congregation is expected to be present. Music and refreshments will be served and short talks by the pastor and others.

moved his hand up and down in his pocket, as if he were going to draw a revolver to shoot her, but she would not say that she saw the revolver. Mrs. Todd, her daughter, was called to the stand, and she testified that Todd always carried a revolver to work, usually having it in his lunch basket. She denied that her mother had told Bonfield and the officers that she had seen the revolver. Bonfield took the stand and swore that she did. Thus the evidence stood when Judge Whallon ordered Mrs. Settle to the grand jury under $500 bond, and Todd was fined $25 and costs for carrying concealed weapons.

When asked if the decision was not peculiar, Prosecutor Hack said that the purpose of the decision was to stop women coming to Police court and filing affidavits charging one thing, then testifying to another. There is much of that in Police court, the prosecutor said. Todd's conviction was based on the testimony of the officers. Todd appealed to the Criminal court.

APPLAUDED THE PASTOR'S REMARKS

Congregation Broke Loose When an Enthusiastic Brother Shouted
"Amen" at M. E. Church.

DR. TEVIS' PRACTICAL TALK

Dr. V. W. Tevis, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, preached a strong sermon-lecture last night and to say that it was well received is putting it lightly. Once when he reached a climax, something away out of the ordinary occurred, when one of the men sitting down front shouted "amen" and the entire assemblage broke into applause. Dr. Tevis did not mind words in putting forth a straightforward temperance speech and treated the subject from a practical standpoint. He used figures and statistics on what effect it would have locally if the saloons were abolished and cited Knoxville, Tennessee as an example for business men to consider.

M'FEELEY SAYS HE IS GOING TO REFORM

Entertained Sheriff King With a Series of Stories of Good Resolutions.

KING MEETS OLD FRIENDS

On the way to the Michigan City prison Friday, John McFeeley broke the monotony of the long, tiresome trip on the Lake Erie train for Sheriff King by telling him how he intended to reform after his release. He said he was coming back to Rushville, join church and intends to "show these people" that he is a good man at heart.

While at the prison, the sheriff called on a number of "friends" who were sent up from here.

LET THE WOMEN DO THE WORK, EH!

William Wirt King of Indianapolis Addressed Women's Big Meeting Sunday.

A MONSTER CROWD ATTENDED

Said the Women Were "The Power Behind the Throne" in Influencing the Voter.

The St. Paul's M. E. church was filled to overflowing yesterday with women, the occasion being the Women's Big Meeting under the auspices of a women's committee composed of members of the various churches. The committee is to be congratulated upon their excellent work in arranging for the program and also in getting out the large crowd on short notice and with such a small amount of advertising.

William Wirt King of Indianapolis addressed the gathering of women along the lines of temperance. Arguments and figures were used to refute the argument advanced by the wets. The idea that the rate of taxation would be higher was granted by the speaker, but the amount would be so small that it would be burdensome to no taxpayer. That the farmer would have no market for his products was branded as preposterous by the lecturer. His arguments were all clear and were reinforced by facts and figures from counties where county option has already won.

The speaker emphasized the fact that the women were "the power behind the throne" in influencing the vote for righteousness. That their sex and they only could influence the voter to cast his ballot against the saloon. He related incidents occurring in everyday life where the home has been wrecked, the mother's heart broken, the father filling a drunkard's grave, and the children cast out on the world to struggle against life's battle; all this woe and misery emanating from the saloon.

The musical program was equal to any rendered in the city. A ten piece orchestra, under the direction of Harry Lucas furnished the instrumental part of the program. Mrs. Ida Spurrier McDaniell sang a beautiful solo and the ladies double quartet sang two selections.

DRY BUSINESS MEN TO HAVE MEETING

Senator Mattingly Will Come Wednesday Night to Deliver an Address in this City.

HAS MADE CHATAUQUA TALKS.

The "drys" among the business men will hold a "business men's" meeting at the Kramer rink Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Hon. Ezra Mattingly, of Washington, a member of the Senate, has been secured to make the address. The Senator has been on the platform at some of the largest Chautauquas in the country. He is chairman of the public morals committee of the Senate, and is said to be especially fitted to address business men.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the business men; a business man will preside and all business men are urged to attend.

THOUSAND TAKE A RIDE ON WAGON

Go With Clinton N. Howard Over the Water Route—Hear a Strong Plea For Prohibition.

SALOON EVILS ARE HELD UP

Dark Pictures Are Painted of the Conditions That go Hand in Hand With Rum Shops.

Over a thousand men crowded into the Christian church Sunday afternoon to hear Clinton N. Howard of Rochester, N. Y., in his address on "A Ride on the Water Wagon." The ride consisted of a review of the work effected by prohibition laws throughout the country and the speaker boasted of the fact that it was now possible to ride hundreds of miles in this glorious country, every mile of it in dry territory. When the speaker declared that he believed the day was not far away when the entire country would be dry he was greeted by cheers. He spoke of the evil effects that followed in the wake of the saloon and laid much of the crime and poverty at the doors of the rum shops. Not for a minute was the speech "dry" in the sense of not being interesting. Howard is a rapid-fire talker and juggler of words and epigrams and delivers his arguments straight out from the shoulder. He has the faculty of keeping his auditors in good humor and introduces many humorous, applicable stories and incidents. There was hardly a phase of the question that he did not touch on during his two hours' discourse, and he presented many strong arguments in favor of abolishing the saloons and rum shops.

Howard is a Prohibitionist, but believes in taking anything one can get in the way of putting out the saloons. He said that the baby boys of this country were the raw material for the saloons and that if they were to be kept grinding the parents must furnish the grist.

Howard dwelt at some length on conditions in Maine and the "New South." He spoke both from personal experience, having made a campaign in Maine, and from statistics he had gathered. He admitted the blind tiger flourished there in some places, but disposed of that by saying: "I would rather have a blind tiger after my boy than one with two eyes that could see what he was doing." Most startling was the figures he gave regarding the number of bank depositors in Maine as compared to some of the adjoining wet States. He said the per centage of residents owning their own homes in Maine was forty-nine per cent.; in two other New England States that he mentioned, the per centage was eighteen and seventeen in every hundred.

The speaker said that the temperance question was a parallel one with slavery and that when two-thirds of the States will have voted dry and will send representatives to Washington and there wield such an influence to bring about a constitutional amendment, as was the case when border States held out against slave emancipation and only came to it under the power of national influence. Another strong argument presented by the speaker was the question of child labor. He named a number of States that had reduced the evil to the minimum through prohibition laws, for he declared when the husband and father was sober he was found in the mills and shops and the children were found in the school, instead of being at work supporting a mother "widowed" by a drunken father.

W. E. Wallace presided and an excellent musical program was rendered.

ed. B. F. Miller sang an obligato solo in a quartette composed of E. B. Thomas, Dr. F. M. Sparks, Dr. F. R. McClanahan and Jesse Pugh. Prof. Wagoner's orchestra furnished the music and Link Giffin led the choruses. The meeting was a big success and all the promoters could hope for.

Howard spoke again in the evening at the United Presbyterian church and many people were turned away. Rev. W. H. Clark had charge of this meeting and many who attended both places declared that Howard delivered a better lecture in the evening.

WETS POSTPONE MEETING

Will Probably Confine Their Campaign to Newspaper Advertising

The meeting planned by the business men wets for this morning at the court house was postponed, a committee waiting on the various men an hour before the time set for the meeting. The wets will probably confine their campaign to newspaper advertising of their cause.

THREATENED TO KILL HIM

Brother Testifies That Dr. Howard
Was Probably of Unsound Mind.

The attorneys for the plaintiffs in the Howard will case finished the introduction of evidence and witnesses this afternoon with the evidence of Edwin B. Howard, a brother of the deceased. He testified that the doctor had threatened to kill him at his father's grave and admitted that he believed his brother to have been partially deranged.

The defense began their side after recess this afternoon. The case will continue for some time.

PREACHED SERMON TO NEW CONVERTS

Special Services Held Sunday For the One Hundred and Twenty-Five Additions.

TEMPERANCE THE NIGHT ISSUE

Yesterday at the Main Street Christian church, a special service was held in the morning for the one hundred and twenty-five converts of the recent revival and Rev. R. W. Abberley preached a special sermon, counseling the new members to steadfastness and urging loyalty to the church, warning them against temptation and the danger of easy discouragement.

Mr. Abberley said the real test of Christian character was not found in our actions in the enthusiasm of a great revival, but in living clean lives every day. He told the converts they had just enlisted and the battle had only begun and if they won the victory of faith the heavenly crown would be theirs.

At the night service the temperance issue was the subject of special attention, and two strong pleas were made for the temperance side, the first speech being made by Attorney B. F. Miller, who said every man who loves God and his fellowmen should vote to take away the temptation of drink. Rev. R. W. Abberley followed in a strong sermon on the drink evil, showing the dangers to our boys and the baleful influence of the legalized traffic in intoxicating drinks. A big audience was present and stirred strongly by the urgent pleas of the speakers for right action in the election Saturday next.

CONGRESS IS NOW ON THE LAST SPURT

This Week to be Filled With Important Business.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Both houses of congress began today to crowd on steam for the last spurt of the present congress. After the close of business next Saturday there will remain only three days for legislation, and it is realized that it will be necessary to get practically all of the appropriation bills through both houses before that time, as most of the remaining days will be necessary for the adjustment of the differences between the two houses.

By a vote of 8 to 2 the subcommittee of the committee on judiciary, which is investigating the merger of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company and the United States Steel corporation, decided to report to the full committee that the president was not authorized to permit the absorption. The committee found also that President Roosevelt was equally unauthorized to direct the attorney general not to interfere with the merger and not to enforce the federal statutes against it. It was decided also that as both companies were engaged in interstate commerce the absorption was in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. It was found that the effect and purpose of the absorption were to monopolize the iron ore supply of the country and generally to eliminate the Tennessee company as a competitor of the United States Steel corporation.

If the full committee subscribes to the findings of the subcommittee the effect would be to administer the severest of rebukes to President Roosevelt and practically to direct the attorney general to bring proceedings against the Steel corporation under the Sherman law.

MAKING EVERY HOUR COUNT NOW

Hoosier Assemblymen See the Need of Haste.

FAR BEHIND IN THEIR WORK

With a Great Accumulation of Bills Upon Which Action Cannot Possibly

Be Taken in the Normal Hours of the Session, Night Sessions Are Now Being Recognized as Necessary and Will Probably Begin This Week—When the Sunday Baseball Bill Comes Up in the Senate a General Discussion Will Be Precipitated.

Indianapolis, Feb. 22.—In spite of the fact that this is Washington's birthday the house and senate met this morning at 10 o'clock. Both branches are so far behind in their work that it is necessary to make every hour count. Night sessions may be held this week to dispose of the big mass of bills in hand.

The Sunday baseball bill will come up within two or three days. Senator Durre, who has charge of the bill, says that no attempt will be made to rush it through without giving every member a chance to be heard.

"I know of no reason," said Senator Durre, "why both the friends and the enemies of the bill should not have the fullest possible opportunity to discuss it on the floor of the senate. There is no reason that I know of why we should attempt to take snap judgment on the bill. As far as I am concerned, snap judgment will not be attempted. Those who are opposed to the bill may feel assured that they will have plenty of notice as to the time when it will be considered, if I am able to have my way."

To Prevent Secret Elections.

A bill drawn by Senator Salem D. Clark of Indianapolis which will affect every election precinct in the state as regards the selection of delegates to conventions nominating chairmen of political organizations became a law when Governor Marshall sent a message to the senate stating that he had given executive approval of the measure.

The bill requires that the places where precinct organization elections are to be held shall be published. Senator Clark drew the bill with the idea that it would prevent the keeping of secret information as to the location of voting places for the selection of delegates, whereby many voters have frequently failed to cast ballots for the want of information as to the location of the polling place.

Women Want to Take a Hand.

A bill introduced by Senator E. E. Moore providing for women members of the boards in charge of a number of state institutions was prepared under the direction of the Local Council of Women of Indianapolis. It provides for a woman member of the board in control of each insane hospital, the village for epileptics, of the state soldiers' home and of the deaf, blind and boys' schools. Coming so late in the session, it is highly improbable that anything will be done toward such changes. Senator Moore, when he took the bill for introduction, explained to those who asked him to introduce it that the fact that he was introducing it should not be regarded as committing him to the support of the measure.

Signed by the Governor.

The following is a list of bills signed by Governor Marshall during the last week:

S. B. 60 (Wood)—Legalizing work performed without specific appropriation by county council.
H. B. 26 (Culbertson)—Amends charter of Hanover college, giving them right to increase the board of trustees to thirty-two and not less than seventeen.

H. B. 40 (Pierson)—Provides for the printing of 10,000 copies of the report of the fish and game commissioner for 1907-8.

S. B. 171 (Stotsenburg)—Doing away with board of works, city controller and city judge in cities of the third class.

S. B. 171 (Stotsenburg)—Amending cities and towns act, abolishing offices of controller, board of works and city judges in third-class cities at option of city council.

S. B. 3 (Clark)—Requiring that the place of precinct organization primaries shall be published.

MARSHALL NOT GUILTY

So Says a Jury in the Celebrated Case at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Feb. 22.—Henry W. Marshall, head of the Western Construction company, was acquitted in the criminal court, the jury having deliberated for thirty-six minutes. Mr. Marshall was charged with defrauding the city of Indianapolis in connection with the patching of asphalt streets, for which his company had a contract. It was alleged that he conspired with Harry Brunaugh, convicted of the charge of altering records, to defraud the city, Brunaugh being the company's Indianapolis representative.

THE DAY AT CHICAGO

Two Great Public Mass Meetings in Honor of George.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—The main features of the city's celebration of Washington's birthday are the two great public mass meetings and the annual banquet of the Union League club.

Governor Fort of New Jersey was the principal speaker today at the first of the mass meetings. The other speakers are William Dudley Foulke, the well known Indiana reformer; President Stryker of Hamilton college and the Hon. Joseph Willett of Georgia, one of the leading orators of the south.

Chicago has not permitted its enthusiasm over Lincoln to cause it to forget Father George, and the arrangements for today's celebrations are probably the most elaborate ever made.

THE GREATEST MILLS IN THE WORLD

WHERE GOLD MEDAL FLOUR IS MADE

COMPOSITE PICTURE

WASHBURN-CROSBY MILLING PLANT

DAILY CAPACITY 35,000 BARRELS

Since GOLD MEDAL FLOUR occupies a most important part in supplying the world with pure food, we believe every housewife, as well as flour users generally, will be interested to see a picture of the Washburn-Crosby Co. Mills, where GOLD MEDAL FLOUR is made, and read some facts concerning the capacity and operations of this enormous plant.

The daily capacity of the Washburn-Crosby Mills is 35,000 barrels. Each year the equivalent of all the wheat raised on 20,000 farms of 160 acres each is ground into the best flour on earth. Every working day in the year more than 150 cars of wheat are consumed, and more than 150 cars of flour and feed are shipped out of the Washburn-Crosby Mills. More than 10,500,000 loaves of bread can be made daily from the product of our mills.

The great grain fields of the west are at our threshold, and furnish a never ending supply of wheat, fresh and free from the dust of long travel. But even so, nothing is left to chance, and our perfect system, including the washing and scouring process to which each grain is subjected, insures the sweetest and cleanest flour possible to obtain.

For a number of years we have operated in our laboratory a miniature flour mill with a daily capacity of scarcely one barrel. This little mill proved itself a valuable adjunct to our testing facilities, enabling us to grind into flour samples of wheat offered in this market. Thus we could tell before actually making purchase whether or not the wheat offered was up to GOLD MEDAL standard.

We have been so well pleased with the results obtained from our miniature testing mill that it was decided to erect a six-story building (see X above) in the midst of our plant to hold a new Experimental Mill of 600 barrels daily capacity.

This new mill is a perfect machine for the manufacture of patent flour. Washburn-Crosby experts have searched the world over for the latest and most improved methods, have studied scientific processes and applied this study and research to the construction of our modern mill.

If an inventor presents to us a new mill which apparently has good points to assist in the manufacture of GOLD MEDAL FLOUR, we give the machine a trial in the Experimental Mill, testing and trying the proposition from every standpoint before deciding that it is good enough to have a place in the main system of our big mills. Thus our enormous capacity in the main plant is permitted to grind on uninterruptedly, using systems and processes which have been previously proven and thoroughly tried out.

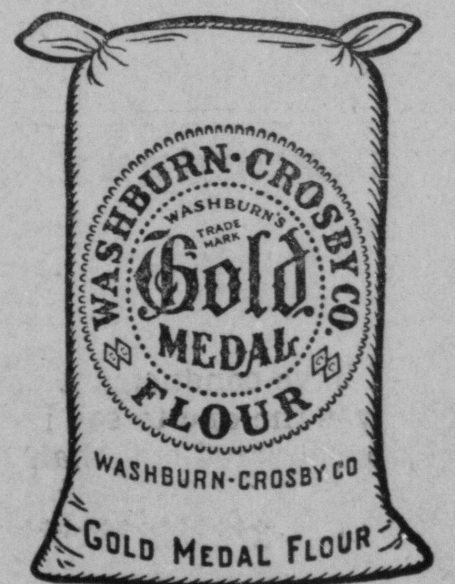

We have the most expert millers in charge of our grinding flour; we have the most up to date milling plant in the world today, and by the use of the new Experimental Mill, we need not put a machine in our main plant nor grind a pound of wheat until we know just what the new machine and the wheat will do for GOLD MEDAL FLOUR. In addition, our Laboratory and Testing Room, Chemists, Experimental Bakers, Flour Testers and the entire organization are working constantly for the quality of GOLD MEDAL.

It will, indeed, pay any buyer of flour to call at the Washburn-Crosby Mills and see what the making of a barrel of flour fit to carry the GOLD MEDAL brand means to us.

Our ambition is to hold a customer's trade permanently after the first order. Merit, quality and economy to the purchaser is the policy which forms the foundation of our business. That it is successful is evidenced by the fact that we have been for years the largest flour manufacturers in the world.

A trial of GOLD MEDAL FLOUR is all we ask of you.

Quality will do the rest.

PEOPLES COLUMN

Thinks Howard Made a Rank Prohibition Speech Sunday.

Editor Republican:

I heard Clinton Howard's prohibition speech at the Christian church Sunday afternoon, and if permitted, I wish to offer a little criticism. It was strictly a prohibition speech by a Prohibitionist. He declared that he was a Prohibitionist. By so doing he spoke then in a political sense, for that party is recognized as a political party. True, the liquor question is in politics, then let us treat it from a political standpoint, and not discuss the moral side of it in this instance.

What defeated Jim Watson at the last election? The Prohibitionists—one of whom entertained us yesterday with witty stories and fanatical Prohi. speeches, for which he was well remunerated. If the Prohis had stood by Watson and voted for county option, which they are now tearing themselves to support, he would have been elected. And even without their votes, if they had not so severely criticized the county option plank and the Republican party in general, many Democrats would have stood by us. But hearing the Prohis cuss and discuss Watson first up one side and then down another, many temperance Republicans and Democrats deserted the cause.

Do you remember what Watson said the day after the election, in an interview? Let us read it and then call to mind some of the things said yesterday by Howard. Said Watson: "The great majority of Prohibitionists care nothing about temperance, their only object being to defeat the Republican party."

Howard predicted yesterday that the Prohis would win and land a man in the White House in 1912. Republicans sat there and applauded, little realizing that the man was speaking for a cause that would drive them and the grand old party of Lincoln, Grant, McKinley and Harrison into the sea if they could.

The Prohis, like the Socialists, are fanatics, and never lose an opportunity to line men up in their cause. Howard even went further; he said the Prohibition State of Maine sent a man to congress who did not fear to wield the big stick and who rode over the packed committees of Speaker Joe Cannon. And even then Republicans sat there and applauded. But how about Cannon? He has always stood for sane legislation and would never be stampeded by Prohibition cranks and for that reason has been stamped as a liberal. Even some of the ministers took the stump against him in his own district during the last campaign. What was the result? He was elected and will continue to be elected, not only to the House of Representatives, but as speaker, as long as he pleases. It is only one of the many examples of where men stand up, openly for something they believe to be right, regardless of the pressure brought to bear by fanatics, and in the face of threats of narrow-minded individuals, who believe that no one has a right to an opinion, unless they think as they do.

Many of us are prone to think, when we hear a number of people complaining on a condition, that it is a far sweeping sentiment. The truth of the matter is the one fellow in a hundred who is displeased will make that fact known, while the ninety-nine that are pleased will not say anything.

But speaking of defeats in politics and Speaker Cannon's success, it can be said without fear of contradiction that everybody that ever espoused the cause of prohibition died a political death as soon as the pall bearers could be mustered. It killed Governor Beckham of Kentucky, Hoke Smith of Georgia, Governor Harris of Ohio, Governor Folk of Missouri, Senator Carmack of Tennessee, Jim Watson of Indiana and our own dear Hanly, for whom many cheerfully bought flowers for his grave. If the law is not repealed it will mean Senator Beveridge will be replaced in two years by a Democrat and will join ranks with Senator Hemenway, who went down under an avalanche of ballots against county option.

Howard spoke of Lincoln, and even made comparison to the abolition of slavery, saying it was a parallel condition that took years to solve. Here is what Lincoln said of prohibition and it fits as well now as it did then.

"Prohibition will work great injury to the cause of temperance. It is a species of intemperance within itself, for it goes beyond the bounds of legislation, and in making crimes out of things that are not crimes. A prohibition law strikes a blow at the very principles on which our government is founded. I have always been found laboring to protect the weaker classes from the stronger and I can never give my consent to such a law as you would propose to enact. Until my tongue shall be silenced by death I will continue to fight for the rights of men."

A FAIR PROPOSITION

Of the Wets Rejected by the Dries. They are Afraid of an Impartial Investigation of Conditions in Dry Towns.

A proposition was made by the Liberals to the "Dries" early this morning that each side should appoint men to represent them, either of whom should have no connection with the liquor interests, and send them in pairs, one representing each side, to several of our neighboring towns that are dry, to investigate their conditions as to business and morality, and report back to the citizens of Rush county.

The Dries got their leaders together and concluded not to accept the proposition of the Liberals. Why would they refuse to have a report come from such source to you? What credit can you give to any report they have to offer you on conditions of these towns when they refuse to give the people the benefit of a report as we propose.

Remember, the members of these committees were NOT to have any connection whatever with the liquor interests.

PROHIBITION AS IT FAILS TO PROHIBIT IN MAINE.

[Harpers Weekly.]

With the beginning of the present year Maine entered upon the most curious phase of its history in regard to the sale of intoxicants. After fifty-seven years the question of prohibition might naturally be thought to be dead in Maine, which was the first of the States to put a prohibitory article in its constitution. But just at this time the question is more alive than ever before. In view of the fact that so many other states in the Union are attempting reform along the lines of the prohibitory principles first essayed in Maine, the situation in the pioneer State loses its provincial aspect and becomes of national interest. The reason why Maine is in an uproar from end to end is curious enough. Its retiring Governor was sufficiently courageous in his political unwisdom to make the politicians redeem their own pledges to the people and to oblige the people to obey their own prohibitory law, generally nullified in the past. He was the first Governor to demand that the Legislature should give him power to enforce that prohibitory law—and for the last four years the law has been enforced so thoroughly that enforced prohibition has for the first time actually been on trial in Maine. The people like their own medicine so little that the enforcement law may possibly be repealed.

The liquor sellers themselves admit that they will not continue to sell when conviction means imprisonment. When it is known that a ramrod judge is coming into a county, dram-shops are closed and rum sellers flee. Maine watches occasional examples of this sort and the radicals rejoice. But the great mass of the people do not seem to care much about it, anyway. No judge is criticised when he uses his discretion and imposes fines in place of imprisonment. When liquor sellers understand that conviction means a fine merely, they understand that the practical result is the system of county license which—until the enforcement commission got busy under Governor Cobb—was in vogue in the majority of Maine counties. The amount of the low license fee was determined by the number of cases secured each year against individuals—this matter being in the hands of the county prosecuting officer, who evidently taxed according to the business a rum seller was doing.

It was very clear that public opinion in the "loose" counties backed up the tolerant officers. It got to the point where juries would not convict when it was understood that jail sentences were to be imposed. Any lawyer or judge in Maine will aver that this latter fact bred disrespect for all criminal law in Maine. In some respects, at least, there was less scandal attached to the nullification of the law by the "loose" counties. The fines passed into the county treasury through the courts. Counties were flushed and thrifty—built new court houses from these "easy money" receipts and relieved the taxpayers of direct taxation for county charges. The officers did not even raid grogshops to secure conviction. An agent for the county, just before court time, went to the office of the collector of internal revenue for the United States at Portsmouth, N. H., and drew off a list of those who were paying a liquor retailer's tax in the county in question. This, by agreement between officers and rumsellers, was accepted as prima facie evidence and the party was fined $100 and costs. In most counties the rumseller was asked up to the cap'n's office twice a year—a very comfortable low license.

By bringing down the club just as hard as the law allows, an offender could be grabbed red-handed any day and put into jail for years, and fined several thousand dollars—it being necessary merely to multiply counts! But no! The rumseller went into partnership with his county officers and the court, and the taxpayers were silent partners. But any county or municipality that wanted to be "dry" kept dry without fuss or trouble. The officers simply gauged the sentiment of the people.

In Cumberland county, after years of wideopenness, Republicans and Democrats flocked together and elected for high sheriff a clergyman, the head of a temperance mission, nominated by that political joke in Maine, the Prohibition party. The Rev. Henry Pearson was a sincere sort of a man, but too guileless for his job. He lectured frequently in various parts of the State, describing his efforts to enforce law, and told of the immense sums that had been offered to him by out-of-the-State liquor wholesalers as bribes. He refused these bribes. He was not so fortunate in some of his special liquor deputies, selected from among his religious friends. There was a public scandal in his office and the reverend high sheriff retired to a health resort and died before he completed his term of office. The popular verdict in Maine was that he died of a broken heart. Then Cumberland county elected a Democrat, who shrewdly felt the pulse of the populace, and established a system of regulation by which a certain number of hotels and saloons were allowed to sell, closing at certain hours and obeying the sheriff's orders implicitly. All the sheriff's deputies had to do was to watch the permitted places, and raid those that were outside the pale. The popularity of this plan, administered without implication of private graft, was shown when the sheriff was re-elected in most triumphant fashion. He is now retiring from office.

Androscoggin county, containing

Lewiston, the second largest city in the State—Cumberland has Portland, the largest—elected a minister of the gospel, too. After about a week's deadlock in the county convention the radicals had tired out the liberals and forced the minister upon the Republican party. He was sheriff two years, was renominated by his party—which promptly went back on him and helped the Democrats elect their man—the first Democratic sheriff in Androscoggin for twenty years or so.

Many able leaders have now come to a realizing sense of the State's dishonesty in not putting its protestations into practice. A few men have been brave enough to come out and argue for regulation of a traffic that gave plain evidence that it could not be killed by prohibition—until human nature shall change its spots. These men have been dammed politically, being ticketed as "rummies" by the radicals.

But at regular intervals there have come "tight times" in the Maine liquor traffic. Then it is that thirsty Maine becomes really picturesque. We are just at the end of four years of tight times in our State, following nearly a decade of open and brazen nullification, during which many counties paid off their debts and built new court houses out of fines, and some sheriffs got rich. These tight times were brought on us by a Governor who took his platform and his party protestations seriously, and insisted on our trying enforced prohibition in place of merely declared prohibition. Never in her history has Maine seen prohibition so thoroughly enforced as it has been during these last four years—and now the politicians are going to repeal that obnoxious enforcement law, discharge the enforcement commission and, by "loosening up" try to save the party whose Governor took his platform too seriously.

But there seems to be abuse connected by fatality with any phase of the liquor question, whether high license, low license, nullification or prohibition. As soon as the tight times began, hundreds of "phony express companies" came into being. At first they were simply "errand boys" to buy liquor in Boston and deliver it from door to door in Maine cities and towns.

But an improvement on a twenty-four hour's wait promptly suggested itself. The express company carried "on hand" stock in its Maine offices and filled orders immediately. The law has dealt some pretty severe blows to the more daring of these fake companies. The regular companies are, of course, bringing liquor into Maine daily in immense quantities, but they act simply as carriers, and are not disguised rumshops.

However, notwithstanding the advantage of the express companies, and though the mails are loaded daily with "liquor circulars" offering great bargains this way of getting liquor is too tame for the average Maine tippler. Men whose appetite for the stuff itself is not especially acute will hunt for liquor when they strike town as men will hunt for game. And another bitter fact is this, when the liquor has been found, sometimes after difficulties, the seeker usually "stays by it" until he is thoroughly intoxicated. Like a camel at an oasis, he loads his stomach anticipating another stretch of parched desert.

MY POLICY

I have conducted a drug store for the past twenty-three years and always sold liquor in a legitimate way, believing that the man that paid the license to sell it was the one to sell it. Since I have been in Rushville the profits on my liquor sales has barely paid my Government license of $25.00 a year. I have always endeavored and shall continue to conduct a REAL LIVE LEGITIMATE DRUG STORE where quality is unquestionable and honest methods and prices prevail

From this day forth there will be one Drug Store in the City of Rushville
That Will Not Sell Liquor of Any Kind
That Store is
WOLCOTT'S DRUG STORE

My OPINION always was that the whiskey drug store is worse than the saloon and ruined the standing of the legitimate druggist and the sooner it was eliminated from the business the better for the legitimate druggist

The last subject is comic and will entertain the audience with something new from the funny world. The first two pictures are among the best that have ever been shown. Miss Clara Gregg will sing, "A Night, a Girl, a Moon."

Large crowds were in attendance at all of the shows at the Grand theater Saturday night. The subjects for tonight are "The Bewitched Brepon," and "The Ingenious Lover." Both pictures are high class and measure up to the standard set by previous films. Miss Iva Brown will sing, "When I am Far Away."

Sometimes a comedian furnishes himself a laugh.

Otis B. Thayer, who comes to the Grand theater here tomorrow night in the new musical production, "The Fascinating Widow," did recently. It was during the successful run of the play at the Majestic theater, New York, that Thayer had been out winning and dining and not until the hands of the clock pointed towards eight p. m. did the comedian realize that he had anything else in the world to do, other than satisfy a healthy appetite and longing thirst. He grabbed his hat and can, called a cab and ordered the driver to make a mad dash for his theater. After arriving there, the actor discovered he had forgotten to shave and since his part is that of a smooth faced New Englander, the absence of beard on the face was imperative. Remembering suddenly a gift that had been sent him a day or two previous he went to his trunk and brought forth a brand new safety razor and begun with might and main to shave. After working diligently for ten minutes or so, he took the razor into the next dressing room, threw it on the table and said to one of his company, "Take that thing. It's a failure. I can't get any hair off with it."

His friend coolly picked it up and said, "Otis, did you ever try a blade in one?" Thayer played that night with a smile that wouldn't come off—and now even a safety has a warm spot in his heart.

Thayer says as may funny things off the stage as on. The other day his little nephew asked him what a safety match was.

"Well," said Thayer, "a safety match is when a baldheaded man marries an armless woman." Which is as humorous as his remark about an impecunious young man who was trying to win an heiress.

"He'll have to work hard to win her," remarked a friend.

"Yes, but he'll have to work a blamed sight harder if he doesn't," quote Mr. Thayer.

CHAPTER III
WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

WHEN the steamer had gone Napoleon Doret went to look for Neca and found her playing with the younger Gales, who reveled in the gifts he had brought. Never had there been such gorgeous presents for little folks.

The elder girl laughed gladly as Poleon entered, though her eyes were wet with the pity of it.

"You seem to bring sunshine wherever you go," she said. "They have never had things to play with like other children, and it makes me cry to watch them."

"Ho, ho," he chuckled, "dis ain' no time for cryin', ba gosh! I guess you don't have so much present w'en you was lit' gal you'se'f, w'at? Mebbe you tink I forget you. Waal, I didn't."

He began to undo the fastenings of a parcel he carried in his arms.

"Don't you dare open it!" cried Neca. "Why, that's half the fun." She was a child herself now, her face flushed and her hands a-tremble. Taking the package to the table, she hurriedly untied the knots while he stood watching her, his teeth showing white against his dark face and his eyes half shut as if dazzled by the sight of her.

"Oh, why didn't you tie more knots in it?" she breathed as she undid the last, and then, opening the wrappings slowly, she gasped in astonishment. She shook it out gently, reverently, a clinging black lace gown of Paris make. Next she opened a box and took from it a picture hat with long jet plumes, which she stroked and pressed fondly against her face. There were other garments also—a silken petticoat, silk stockings and a pair of high heeled shoes to match, with certain other delicate and dainty things which she modestly forbore to inspect before the Frenchman, who said no word, but only gazed at her, and for whom she had no eyes as yet. Finally she laid her presents aside and, turning to him, said in a hushed, awe-stricken voice:

"It's all there, everything complete! Oh, Poleon—you dear, dear Poleon!" She took his two big hands by the thumbs, as had been her custom ever since she was a child, and looked up at him, her eyes wet with emotion. But she could not keep away from the dress for long and returned to feast her eyes upon it.

"You lak it, eh?" pressed Poleon, hungry for more demonstrative expression.

"Oh-h!" she sighed. "Where on earth did you get it? Why, it must have cost a fortune!"

"Wan night I gamble in beeg saloon. Yes, sir! I gamble good dat night too. For w'e I play roulette, den I dance, den I play some more, an' by an' by I see a new dance gal. She's French gal, from Montreal. Dat's de one I tol' you 'bout. Ba gar, she's swell dress' too. She's name' Marie Bourgette."

"Oh, I've heard about her," said Neca. "She owns a claim on Bonanza creek."

"Sure, she's frien's wit' Charlie McCormack, dat riche feller, but I don't know it dis tam', so I ask her for dance wit' me. Den we drink a bottle of champagne—twenty dollar."

"Mamselle, I say, 'how much you charge for sell me dat dress?'"

"For w'y shall I sell 'im? she say. 'I don't wear 'im before till tonight, an' I don't get no more dress lak dis for 'tousan' dollar.'"

Neca exclaimed excitedly.

"For w'y you sell 'im? I say. 'B'cause I'll tak 'im down to Flambeau for Neca Gale, w'at never had no dress lak dat in all her life.' Waal, sir, dat Marie Bourgette she's hear of you before, an' your dad, too—mos' all dose Cheechakos know 'bout Old Man Gale—so she say:

"W'at lookin' kind of gal is dis Neca? An' I tell her all 'bout you. W'en I'm t'rough she say:

"'But maybe your little frien' is more bigger as I am. Maybe de dress won't fit."

"Ha, you don't know me, mamselle!" I say. 'I can guess de weight of a caribou to five poun'. She'll be same size lak 'kin' one inch roun' de wais'."

"Poleon Doret," she say, 'you ain' no Franchemans to talk lak dat. Look here! I can sell dis dress for 'tousan' dollar tonight, or I can trade 'im for gol' mine on El Dorado creek to some dose Swede w'at want to catch a gal, but I'm goin' sell 'im to you for t'ree hundred dollar, jus' w'at I pay for 'im. You wait here till I come back."

"No, no, Mamselle Marie, I'll go 'long, too, for so you don't change your min', I say. An' I stan' outside her door till she pass me de whole works."

"Don't forget de little shoes," I say, an' dat's how it come."

"And you paid $300 for it?" Neca said, aghast. The Canadian shrugged.

"Only for de good heart of Marie Bourgette I pay wan 'tousan'," said he. "I mak' seven hundred dollar clean profit."

"It was very nice of both of you, but—I can't wear it. I've never seen a dress like it except in pictures, and I couldn't"—She saw his face fall and said impulsively:

"I'll wear it once anyhow, Poleon, just for you. Go away quick now and let me put it on."

"Dat's good," he nodded as he moved away. "I bet you mak' dose dance hall women look lak sucker."

self in her first fine dress. Time and again she had studied pictures from the "outside" showing women arrayed in the newest styles and had closed her eyes to fancy herself dressed in like manner.

Poleon's eye had been amazingly correct, for the gown fitted her neatly save at the waist, which was even more than an inch too large notwithstanding the fact that she had never worn such a corset as the well formed Marie Bourgette was accustomed to.

She pondered long and hesitated modestly when she saw its low cut, which exposed her neck and shoulders in a totally unaccustomed manner, for it struck her as amazingly indecent until she scurried through her magazines again and saw that its construc-

VINOL CURES CHRONIC COUGHS, COLDS AND BRONCHITIS

After Other Remedies Fail

"I have been troubled with a chronic cold and bronchitis for a long time and have tried many remedies without finding relief. Through the kind suggestion of a friend I tried Vinol, and after taking four bottles, am entirely cured." A. H. Wilde, 733-8th Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

S. McDonald, 147 W. Congress St. Paul, Minn., writes: "I contracted a severe cold last winter and thought I would never get rid of it. I tried Vinol as a last resort, and it has completely cured me."

Vinol combines two world-famed tonics, the healing, medicinal properties of cod liver oil and tonic iron, deliciously palatable and agreeable to the weakest stomach. For this reason, Vinol is unexcelled as a strength-builder for old people, delicate children, weak and run-down persons, after sickness and for Chronic Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis.

tion, as compared with others, was most conservative. Even so she shrank at sight of herself below the line of suburn, for she was ringed about like a blue winged teal, the demarcation being more pronounced because of the natural whiteness of her skin. She sat down, dress and all, in the thick softness of a great brown bearskin and thought it over.

How odd it was, now that she considered it, that she needed no aid with these alien garments; that she knew instinctively their every feature; that there was no intricacy to cause her more than an instant's trouble.

She was interrupted in her reverie by the passing of a shadow across her window and the stamp of a man's feet on the planks at the door. Of course it was Poleon, who had come back to see her. So she rose hastily, gave one quick glance at the mirror above her washstand, choosing the side that distorted her image the least, and, hearing him still stamping, perfunctorily called:

"Come in! I'll be right out."

She kicked the train into place behind her, looping the shawl carelessly about her in a way to veil her modesty effectively. She crossed proudly to the reading table to give him a fair view of her splendor and was in the middle of the room before she looked up. Taken aback, she uttered a little stran-

"Certainly not!" she declared. "He bought this dress for me, and I put it on to please him. After he sees it I will take it off, and—"

"Don't—don't take it off—ever," said Burrell. "I thought you were beautiful before because of your quaintness and simplicity, but now—his chest swelled—why, this is a breath from home. You're like my sister and the girls back in Kentucky, only more wonderful."

"Am I?" she cried eagerly. "Am I like other girls? Do I really look as if I'd always worn clothes like these?"

"Born to them," said he.

Her warmth and unaffected frankness suffused him as she stood out, turning to show the beauties of her gown, her brown hands fluttering tremulously as she talked.

"It's my first party dress, you know, and I'm as proud of it as Molly is of her rubber boots. It's too big in here and too small right there. That girl must have had a bad chest. But otherwise it fits me as if it had been made for me, doesn't it? And the shoes—aren't they the dearest things? See!"

She held her skirts back, showing her two feet side by side, her dainty ankles slim and shapely in their silk.

"They don't wear as well as moccasins." Both laughed delightedly till he broke in impulsively:

"Oh, girl, don't you know how beautiful you are?"

"Of course I do," she cried, imitating his change of voice, then added naively, "That's why I hate to take it off."

"Where did you learn to wear things like that?" he questioned. "Where did you get that—well, that air?"

"It seems to me I've always known. There's nothing strange about it. The buttons and the books and the eyes are all where they belong. It's instinct, I suppose, from father's side."

"Probably, I dare say I should understand the mechanism of a dress suit, even if I'd never seen one," said the man, amused, yet impressed by her argument.

"I've always had visions of women dressed in this kind of clothing, white women, never natives, not dressed like this exactly, but in dainty, soft things, not at all like the ones I wear. I seem to have a memory, although it's hardly that either; it's more like a dream, as if I were somebody else. Father says it is from reading too much."

"A memory of what?"

"It's too vague and tantalizing to tell what it is, except that I should be called Merryd."

"Merryd? Why that?"

"I'll show you. See." She slipped her hand inside the shawl and drew from her breast a thin gold chain on which was strung a band ring. "It was grandmother's. That's where I got the fancy for the name of Merryd, I suppose."

HOME COMING OF BIG FLEET

Battleships Once More at Anchor
In Hampton Roads.

GIVEN A GREAT RECEPTION

As He Gave the Fleet Godspeed When It Departed on Its World Cruise, So the President Was on Hand to Bid the Homecoming Sailors Welcome—Thousands of Visitors Gather at Old Point to Witness Remarkable Naval Pageant.

Fort Monroe, Va., Feb. 22.—Out fleet is home again. Riding safely at anchor in the waters of Hampton Roads after a welcome such as never before warmed the hearts of returning sailormen are the sixteen "bully" vessels that have sailed around the world. It is impossible to resist the temptation to say that they look as "fit for a fight or a frolic" as they did when they sailed away from here more than four months ago under the command of Admiral Evans.

When the Mayflower, bearing President Roosevelt and his invited guests including Secretary of the Navy Newberry, sailed down the harbor to day the guns of Fort Monroe told the thousands of visitors to these shores that the welcome to the fleet would begin soon. Immediately the smoke began to rise from the stacks of the scores of excursion vessels chartered to bear the thousands of visitors out to sea to welcome the fleet. Turning their bows eastward, they steamed slowly after the Mayflower and took up their positions as near the presidential yacht as safety and the naval regulations would permit.

Saluting the President.

When the Mayflower reached the position selected for her off Thimble shoal light her anchor was cast and the party aboard prepared to await the coming of Admiral Sperry and his ships. Word was sent to the admiral that his commander-in-chief was waiting for him, and the Connecticut hoisted the signal for the fleet to follow the flagship in. Steaming at a fair rate, the Connecticut moved past the Mayflower, her guns booming out the presidential salute. The Mayflower responded, and the great naval review was on.

From that time until the last of the twenty-five returning warships had sailed past the Mayflower and paid its respects to the president in noise and smoke there was a continual roar of artillery that shook the Virginia hills and made conversation on the excursion steamers a difficult task. The civilian vessels added to the din with sirens and whistles, amid which the cheers of the visiting thousands anxious to do their share in the noisy welcome was all but lost. It was a pandemonium such as was never before heard in this historic harbor.

While the fourteen vessels of Sperry's fleet that have made the circuit of the world, covering more than 42,000 miles since they left here in December, 1907, received the greatest amount of applause, the two battleships which joined the fleet on the Pacific coast and the vessels of Admiral Arnold's convoying squadron, received their due share of attention. Probably the greatest amount of applause greeted the appearance of the Connecticut, which was the flagship of the fleet throughout the cruise, and the Nebraska, which made its first appearance on the Atlantic seaboard.

Twenty-Five Warships in Line.

In reviewing the fleet the Mayflower occupied almost exactly the same position she did when the president bade godspeed to the sixteen battleships at the beginning of the cruise. The fleet which saluted him today, however, presented a more imposing appearance than the outbound armada. Then sixteen warships sailed south; today twenty-five war vessels, including twenty battleships, passed in review before the commander in chief.

When the last ship had passed the Mayflower the presidential yacht weighed anchor and turned to make up her position between the Connecticut and the Louisiana. Hardly had she cast anchor again when boats were cleared from the sides of the vessels of the fleet and Admiral Sperry and the commanders and executive officers of the ships were rowed to the Mayflower to pay their respects to the president. After these official calls were paid and the naval men had returned to their own vessels the president visited in turn the flagship of each division and met and greeted the assembled officers and the representative enlisted men sent to pay the respects of the jacks to him.

Tonight will be memorable in the history of Fort Monroe, Newport News and the surrounding towns. The focus of the reception to the returning sailors will be in the Chamberlin hotel, where the Navy league will give a dinner to Sperry and his commanding officers. The dinner will be followed by a ball, and for several days there will be a round of gayeties here. Most of them, of course, will be reserved for the officers, but the enlisted men have not been forgotten. They will have a ball and reception of their own on Feb. 27 in the sail loft of the Norfolk navy yard.

BIG MOB AT OTTUMWA THIRSTED FOR BLOOD

Shocking Crime of Negro Stirs
People to Fury.

Ottumwa, Ia., Feb. 22.—The citizens of Ottumwa last night were on the verge of adding another bloody chapter to the history of race riots in the United States. A mob of men and boys which increased from 100 to more than 1,000, gathered around the city jail thirsty for vengeance upon an unknown negro who committed an assault upon a white woman here early Sunday morning.

Three negroes were taken to the city jail as suspects and one to the county jail. A demonstration was made by the mob as the fourth man was brought in, but there was no man daring enough to lead. John Junkin, a negro suspected of the murder of Clara Rosen two weeks ago, was taken out of town secretly by the police following the early manifestation of mob spirit. The recently organized vigilance committee aided the police and kept the situation well in control. Company C of the national guard was held in the barracks.

WAR ON GREEKS

South Omaha Mob Wreaks Summary
Vengeance on Aliens.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 22.—From mid-afternoon Sunday until far into the night, South Omaha, this city's big suburb, was the scene of rioting, murderous assault and pillage. More than thirty buildings were destroyed, burned or badly damaged, and probably a score of persons injured, half that number seriously. By heroic work the police prevented actual loss of life.

The immediate cause of the trouble was the killing on Friday night of Policeman Edward Lowery by John Masuredes, a Greek, whom the officer had placed under arrest. On Saturday a petition was circulated in South Omaha and signed by hundreds of citizens, setting forth that a large number of Greek residents of the place were of the undesirable class, and calling for a mass meeting at the city hall for Sunday afternoon to discuss methods of ridding the city of them.

More than a thousand men attended the meeting which was addressed by men of prominence, including two members of the state legislature. Some of the speeches were calculated to inflame the passions of the more excitable, and when the meeting ended a large portion of the crowd started out with the intention of putting into effect the suggestion of the speakers in the most summary manner.

INDIANA POLITICS

ROBERT G. TUCKER.

Indianapolis, Feb. 22.—It is believed here now that the senate Republican leaders are disposed to kill the Tomlinson-Proctor county local option repeal bill and let their party take the responsibility for their action in the next campaign. When the Tomlinson-Proctor bill passed the house it was thought that there were enough Republicans of "liberal" tendencies in the senate to put it through in an amended form, making it a model high license measure. The indications are that the temperance element of the Republican party, headed by Senator Mattingly, chairman of the public morals committee; Senator William E. Springer, Senator E. E. Moore and others will hold the whip hand. The Anti-Saloon League lobby has controlled the policy of a majority of the senate Republicans during the last week. It is declared that the league leaders have not had much trouble in holding in line a majority of the senate Republicans by representing to them that it would be suicidal for their party to permit the repeal of the law. One explanation offered for the delay in reporting the bill in the senate is that Senator Mattingly and other Republicans want to wait for the returns from the elections that are to be held Tuesday in Grant, Daviess and a few other counties. If these counties vote "dry," as they are expected to do, the result will be pointed to by the temperance Republicans as additional reason why the law should not be changed. There is a hard fight on between the "wet" and "dry" elements in Grant county. The "wets" probably will carry Marion, but the rest of the county is "dry" and will vote that way. The Anti-Saloon League is very anxious to win in Grant county to offset the effect of their defeat in Wayne. The situation so far as the Republicans are concerned is very peculiar. The Anti-Saloon League is willing to take the liquor question out of politics after it gets the legislature to adopt a state-wide prohibition amendment to the constitution. Until then county local option will be a live political issue and the Republican leaders are afraid that their party will be hit by the Prohibitionist and Anti-Saloon League kite in spite of anything they can do, unless there is a good, strong temperance law enacted at this session. Many prominent Republicans who supported the platform last year are objecting to their party being sacrificed in order that the plans of the Anti-Saloon League and its followers may be carried out. Yet they are unable, apparently, to do anything with the senate. It is said that there are seven or eight Republican senators who would vote to repeal the county local option act if they could get a $1,000 license law with severe restrictions for the saloon traffic.

Gov. Marshall's message to the general assembly, calling its attention to the fact that the state will be unable to meet its obligations April 1, unless measures are enacted giving the state auditor authority to call on the county treasurers for advance payment of taxes, was the first intimation the public had of the shortage. When Governor Hanly read his recent financial message to the legislature he dwelt at length on the excellent financial condition of the state. He pointed to the debt-reducing administrations of the Republicans and said that the rest of the state debt can be wiped out within a short time. It now develops from the treasurer's own figures that the state has been getting along for the last twelve or fifteen months on money advanced by the county treasurers. The expenditures have become so enormous that the regular revenues were insufficient. It seems that the enactment of the public depository law caused the county authorities to place their funds in banks and to pay semi-annually to the state. Nearly a month ago some of the Democratic leaders in the legislature were informed of the state's condition, but they refused to take any steps because they wanted to put the Republicans in a hole politically. Governor Marshall, however, has informed the Democrats that they must get busy and put over laws for relief. It is said that the governor feels that the public will see readily that the shortage was created by the Republicans and relieved by the Democrats. The discovery of the shortage is liable to affect many appropriation bills now pending.

Governor Marshall held a public hearing on the Linton superior court bill regarding which there have been some ugly stories. He read letters from Fred Bays of Sullivan and Superintendent Loughlin of the southern hospital for the insane at Evansville, tending to prove that Senator Bland, author and promoter of the Linton bill, had attempted to use his position as chairman of the senate finance committee to force them to line up for his measure. Senator Bland made a fiery speech denying all of the charges. He asserted that he told Loughlin to keep his hands off in the fight. Loughlin says that Bland wanted him to come here and line up Senator Burre and Senator Gonnerman, and that he mentioned to him his connection with the appropriation committee. Bays, who was present, said he would make an affidavit backing up the charges he made in his letter. Bays is a trustee of the Southern hospital. The governor will not announce his decision on the bill until tomorrow.

WASHINGTON IS HONORED TODAY

Father of His Country Still
First in Our Hearts.

MANY NOTABLE CELEBRATIONS

President Elect Taft on the Program at University of Pennsylvania—At Washington University Governor Hughes is the Chief Orator—All the States in the Union Except Mississippi Observe the Day as a Public Holiday—General Observance Among Colleges.

Although the celebration of the centennial of the birth of Lincoln has overshadowed this year the birthday of George Washington, the usual honors are being paid today to the memory of the Father of His Country. As a legal holiday today is far more widely observed than Lincoln day, since the adoption of the latter day as a holiday has not become general in the greater part of the states. Washington's birthday is a legal holiday in every state except Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, the day is observed with exercises in the public schools.

President Elect Taft delivered an address today at the University of Pennsylvania, Governor Fort of New Jersey spoke at the annual celebration of the Union League club of Chicago, and Governor Hughes of New York was the principal speaker at the winter convocation of George Washington university in the national capital.

TAFT IN PHILADELPHIA

President Elect Takes Part in Washington Memorial Exercises.

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—The principal feature of Washington's birthday in this city is the presence of President Elect Taft as guest of the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Taft delivered the university day oration in the Academy of Music today and will be the guest of the University of Pennsylvania Alumni society at its annual dinner in the university gymnasium tonight.

For many years Washington's birthday has been a great day in the university's calendar. The orators are chosen among the leading speakers of the nation. Among Mr. Taft's predecessors have been President Roosevelt, President McKinley and the Hon. Joseph H. Choate.

An Open Letter

President, E. F. Miller.
Vice-President, A. L. Gary.

Secretary, A. E. Martin.
Treasurer, Will Cherry.

RUSH COUNTY LOCAL OPTION LEAGUE, RUSHVILLE, INDIANA.

TO THE BUYING PUBLIC:--

It has often been said that the way to a business man's heart is through his business.

The last few days the saloon men have been going over this city, traveling in pairs, and soliciting support from business men. They have gone into every store in Rushville and have notified the merchants in no uncertain terms that the saloon trade is a very important element of the year's business. For this reason the support of the business men has been demanded for the 'wets.'

It has been represented that a majority of the business men of Rushville are supporting the liquor interests.

So-called 'BUSINESS MEN'S MEETINGS' have been held. Business men always hear from the saloons. They ought to hear from the other side.

We do not believe in the Boycott. It is wrong in principle and un-American in spirit. But if you want to trade in a 'wet' town you can say so. If you want to trade in a 'dry' town you can say so.

Each person who reads this letter is doubtless a customer of some Rushville merchant, either for dry goods, groceries, hardware, meats, or miscellaneous articles; perhaps for all. If you are, when you read this letter, write or phone to your merchant and tell him what you buy and express your opinion about the merits of a 'wet' or 'dry' town.

The impression has been made that Farmers and Farmers' Sons will not trade in any town unless received by the open saloon. Country people are therefore especially asked to express themselves on this question.

Write or phone at once.

Respectfully yours,

THE COMMITTEE.
